

About the Organization

In October 2008, the IND Foundation was formed as an independent nonprofit organization with the mission to serve arts and culture initiatives at Indianapolis International Airport. This mission includes maintaining the existing public art collection, acquiring new works of art, and coordinating rotating displays of arts and culture. Under the leadership of a group of community and arts leaders, the Foundation will work to broaden the cultural experience at the airport by furthering the public art component and exploring ways to bring performing arts and museum exhibits to the facility.

IND: The Art of It All chronicles the creative approach to architecture, art, and cuisine at the airport. Proceeds from the sale of this book will benefit the Foundation's ongoing effort to develop arts and culture programs at IND.

IND THE ART OF IT ALL

A creative approach.

The perfect landing.

IND has arrived.

The new Indianapolis International Airport provides a bold first impression to one of the nation's most vibrant cities. Designed by HOK Architects in St. Louis and AeroDesign Group in Indianapolis, it was the city's first new passenger terminal in more than 50 years—and worth the wait. What greets passengers and the public goes far beyond a shiny transportation center. Behold—captivating artwork where least expected, a sushi chef in the food court, intuitive and uplifting architecture, local restaurants heavily starred in guidebooks, even gardens where passengers can enjoy some fresh air. The new IND burst out of the gate as a redefinition of the 21st-century airport experience.
